The agreement is fine. It was a shame that the Clinton administration started this in the first place. I believe it did more harm to the country and the market then what they thought it would do. Obviously, for many groups, the only way they will feel vindicated is if Microsoft goes under. What they don't realize is with all the computers going into the worst schools will in fact be beneficial to everyone. Kids will have the opportunity to at least learn the basics and will go on from there. Be responsible and so on and so on.... It's a start in the right direction.
